His "Little Gal."

"It ain't everybody I'd trust my little gal to," said old farmer Skinner to the love-lorn swain who in the far West had become enamored of Miss Sally Skinner, and wished to carry her from the loving care and shelter of the home nest.

The "little gal," who was 5 feet 11 inches tall in her bare feet, as she was at that moment, hid her happy, blushing face on the dear, fond old father's shoulder and wept happy tears as he said to Sally's deeply-moved and sympathetic young lover: "You must take great care of my wee birdling, Jack; recollect that she's been raised kind o' tender like."

"Two acres a day is all I've asked her to plow, and an acre of corn a day is all she's use to hoeing. She kin do light work, such as making rail fences and digging post-holes, and burning brush, and all that but ain't used to regular farm work, and you mustn't ask too much of her. It's hard for her old dad to give his little sunshine up. He'll have to split his own firewood and dig his own taters now, but go, birdie and be happy."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for full particulars.

HERE'S MODERN FAIRY STORY

Princes Today Select Their Brides
With an Eye to the Economical and Practical.

A certain prince, having made up his mind to marry, let his decision be known far and wide throughout the kingdom. Being heart free, he invited all young ladies to come to the palace as soon as ever they liked, and he would choose a wife from among their number.

When he had narrowed the candidates down to four, all of whom were beautiful, the prince put a question to each.

"What causes you to think you would make a good wife?" he asked.

"I never nag," said the first.

"I wouldn't care how many times you went out at night," said the second.

"I have an income of my own," said the third, "and wouldn't bother you for money."

The third one spoke with especial confidence as if it was all over but the wedding bells.

"And you?" said the prince, turning to the fourth damsel.

"I," said the fourth damsel, "can make a piece of meat that I buy for Sunday dinner last all through the week until Thursday night, and can serve it up tastefully in a different style each time."

"Go buy your trousseau," said the prince, kissing her. "With the cost of living going up and up, you are the girl for me."

And they lived economically forever after.

MISTAKEN AS TO LOCATION

Rude Awakening for Rich Man Who Had Foolishly Thought He Was in Heaven.

The rich man died and found himself in a luxurious smoking room. He touched the bell and a perfectly trained flunkey brought him a wonderful cigar and the most delicious wine he had ever tasted. He lazily noticed that the room had no windows, and he thought he would like a little fresh air. He passed into the next and equally magnificent room, and there, too, he found no windows.

By now he had a distinct desire for the open. In the third room also there were no windows. He began to walk faster. He wanted to see a cloud, although never in his life had he experienced such a desire. He started to run through rooms and rooms; there was no end to them. He grew frantic and rushed headlong, as it seemed to him, for miles and miles. At last he sank exhausted into a seat in a room papered in pale green and hung with oil paintings by royal academicians, framed in costly gold.

He rang an electric bell feverishly. Another perfect waiter appeared. "I want to go into the garden. Show me the way, quick." "Sorry, sir, but it's against orders," was the respectful answer. "Against orders! What, isn't this heaven?" "No, sir."—Toronto Globe.

Stanley's Oratory.

(Lexington Leader.)

In a newspaper friendly to Congressman Augustus Owsley Stanley we find this extract from one of his celebrated orations:

"For centuries neither the telescope of the astronomer nor the researches of science could solve the mystery of that misty light, that glimmering gossamer encircling the black brow of night; but at last the spectrum revealed in this nebula unborn worlds, held in a shimmering gauze; revolving masses of incandescent gas, cooling through the passing cycles of time, growing denser without, shrinking within, forming smoky concentric circles, a whirling, luminous fog, congealing into molten rings drawn by their own gravity into ruby globes and these spinning spheres shaped by the plastic hand of Divinity, like clay upon a potter's wheel, into planets and their satellites, new solar systems, swinging for the first time into their orbits in the trackless, fathomless depths above. Thus God peoples the heavens' luminous worlds."

That is what we would call some language, Owsley.

If them words can't elect a man to the United States Senate there is no use in calling on the dictionary for help.

Forest Notes.

China imports wood pulp from Great Britain, Sweden, Norway and Germany.

The highest mountain in Montana, Granite Peak, with an altitude of nearly 13,000 feet, is in the Bear-tooth national forest.

Norway has 144 tree planting societies. The first was founded in 1900, and since then 26 million trees have been planted, more than two million having been set out last year.

In many parts of the west snow is leaving the mountains earlier than usual. Foresters say that this may mean a bad fire season, and they are making plans for a hard campaign.

New Jersey is said to have the greatest proportion of railroad mileage of any state in the country, or one mile of railroad to every three square miles of territory. This makes an unusual risk of forest fires set by railroads.

The heavy storms in southern California during the past rainy season wiped out many miles of trails in the national forests of that part of the state. They are now being rebuilt for the coming summer, for use in fire protection. They are also of great use to the tourists, campers and prospectors.

Cancer Credited To Cooking Methods.

New York, April 17.—A statement by Dr. William J. Mayo that the prevalence of cancer perhaps is traceable to present methods of cooking was to the laymen one of the salient opinions in a maze of technical discussions at the opening of the American Surgical association's annual convention. Dr. Mayo is a delegate from Rochester, Minn., and president of the association. He explained that cancer of the stomach formed a third of all cancer cases among civilized people.

Dr. Mayo said that the amount of meat consumed undoubtedly had something to do with the prevalence of cancer. He explained, then, other kinds of cancer, among them the peculiar form which attacks the mouths of the natives of India, brought on by an irritation due to chewing betel nuts.

During a discussion about the advisability of operating for appendicitis, Dr. James E. Moore, of Minneapolis, said that he felt that the removal of the appendix was "an interference with the designs of the Lord."

The present convention is preliminary to the international congress of surgeons, which will meet here Monday, with representatives from all parts of the United States and most of the European countries. Fifty foreign delegates have already arrived.

Ben Efficiency In Denmark.

In the current issue of Farm and Fireside appears the following about hen efficiency in Denmark:

"The Danes have hen efficiency as well as cow efficiency. The average egg production per hen among the members has been raised to 150 during the past eighteen years since the Danish Co-operative Egg Expert Society has been in active operation. This society began with a few hundred members and now has about forty thousand. Members are pledged to gather their eggs every day and ship them at least once a week."

The eggs that are not distributed to consumers by the time they are eight or ten days old are pickled and used to meet the demand for cooking and lower-priced trade. The average returns to the Danish farmers for eggs throughout the year is about eighteen cents a dozen, but they are sold by weight. The cost of co-operative collecting and selling is about one-half cent a dozen. The Danish hen, therefore, furnishes the farmers a gross income of about $2.75 per hen. When they learn just how the egg-laying trait is inherited it will be $3.75."

Woman Past Help.

Chandler, Okla.—In a letter from this place, Mrs. Ella Flowers says: "I hardly know how to thank you for the good that Cardui has done me. Before I tied Cardui, I thought I was past help, but after taking it I was relieved at once, and gained at least 10 pounds. Everybody says I look so much better. I am still improving greatly." $160,000,000 Spent for Good Roads in 1913.

Farm and Fireside says: "The good-roads movement has resulted in the expenditure of a greater amount of money on the roads in the last year than ever before. In 1904 the total sum expended on public roads in the United States was about $80,000,000. In 1913 it was more than $160,000,000. The greatest progress in road-building has been made in States in which a part or all of the money is drawn from the state treasuries. The great problem from now on is to see that the money is wisely expended, without waste and without graft."
